TERRORIZED: THE COLLECTED INTERVIEWS - VOLUME TWO

Ian Glasper

Collection of interviews that appeared in Terrorizer Magazine

Forewords from All Out War's Mike Score and OG Terrorizer editor Nick Terry

'Terrorizer was the world's leading extreme music publication from its launch in 1993 to its untimely demise in 2018. Ian Glasper was one of the few constants during the magazine's twenty-five year reign of terror, and their main correspondent for punk, hardcore and thrash metal (not to mention the occasional death metal band and other surprises along the way), and here - for the very first time - he has collected every single interview of his that ever ran, and even a few that didn't. 'Terrorized: Volume One' includes hundreds of old school interviews that appeared in the mag,

#Terrorizedbooks

"In featuring such a diverse and varied range of bands it shows the exceptional good taste and talent Ian has in rooting out quality stuff from right across genres"
– Michael McKeegan, Therapy?

Ian Glasper has been writing about punk since 1986, when he first started his own fanzine, 'Little Things Please Little Minds'. Glasper is now busy writing, recording and touring with his own punk and hardcore bands, keeping his finger firmly on the pulse and staying in touch with the grass roots DIY element of the punk scene that so drew him to it in the first place. He firmly maintains that you can't fake this and can only really write with authority on the things you know and have experienced for yourself. He currently writes for Bass Player, Down for Life and the (brand new) Fistful of Metal magazines, as well as contributing to online webzines such as Mass Movement and regularly penning liner notes for retrospective punk releases.
